PART I - THE ELECTORAL MAP OF QUÉBEC

INTRODUCTION

Pursuant to section 22 of the Election Act, the Commission de la représentation hereby delivers to the National Assembly its preliminary report on the boundaries of electoral divisions.

> 22. If the Commission decides to establish new boundaries, it shall, within twelve months following the date of the general election, remit a preliminary report to the President or the Secretary General of the National Assembly in which it proposes new boundaries to the electoral divisions of Québec.
> The report shall be made public immediately. The President of the National Assembly shall table the report in the National Assembly within fifteen days of receiving it if it is sitting or, if it is not, within fifteen days after the opening of the next session or resumption.

The Commission, in the first part of this report, reviews the criteria that apply when establishing boundaries. The Commission then refers to its summary report of 19 December 1989 and the Parliamentary Committee of 5 April 1990. A general description of the electoral division boundary proposal then follows. Finally, the forthcoming steps on the working agenda of the Commission are outlined. In the second part of this report, the proposed map is examined in detail. Each of the electoral divisions is described in the second part of this report. Concordance tables have been added for ease of reference when comparing the current and the proposed maps.

1. CRITERIA FOR ESTABLISHING BOUNDARIES

After the general election of 25 September 1989, the Commission started examining whether it was appropriate to proceed to a new description of the electoral divisions of Québec in keeping with its legal duty set out at sections 19 to 21 of the Election Act.

> 19. Within three months following the date of a general election, the Commission shall remit to the President or the Secretary General of the National Assembly a summary report in which it shall indicate whether, in its opinion, new boundaries to the electoral divisions are necessary to comply with the criteria established by this chapter.
>
> 20. The summary report of the Commission shall be submitted to the Committee on the National Assembly for examination within thirty days following its remittance to the President or the Secretary General of the National Assembly.
>
> For the purposes of examination of the report, all the members may take part in the debates of the Committee on the National Assembly.
>
> When the Committee on the National Assembly examines the report, the Commission shall furnish it with all the required documents and information and be at its disposal to assist it in carrying out its work.
> 21. After hearing the representations of the Members in the Committee on the National Assembly, the Commission shall decide whether or not to establish new boundaries and communicate its decision to the President or the Secretary General of the National Assembly within ten days following the end of the proceedings of the Committee on the National Assembly.

The Election Act sets out, at section 14, the two general rules that must be strictly complied with when establishing boundaries for electoral divisions:

> 14. Québec shall be divided into not fewer than 122 nor more than 125 electoral divisions, whose boundaries shall take into account the principle that the vote of each elector is of equal weight.

The strict application of the principle that every vote is of equal weight implies that the vote of every elector has the same proportionate value regardless of the electoral division in which this right of vote is exercised. The ceiling of 125 electoral divisions mentioned in section 14 was reached in 1988.

The Election Act provides a number of criteria for the implementation of these general rules. For instance, section 16 establishes the parameters governing the number of electors in each electoral division.

> 16. The boundaries of each electoral division shall be delimited in such a way that the number of electors in a division, according to the list of electors in force at the last general election, does not deviate by more than 25% from the quotient obtained by dividing the total number of electors by the number of electoral divisions.

On the basis of the electoral list in force during the 1989 elections, Québec has 4 670 690 electors allocated among 125 electoral divisions. This represents an increase of 2.06% over 1985 and an average of 37 366 electors per division. Consequently, within the confines of section 16 of the Election Act, an electoral division cannot contain more than 46 707 nor less than 28 024 electors.

Moreover, section 15 of the Election Act requires that the Commission de la représentation électorale respect, insofar as possible, natural communities when establishing boundaries for the electoral divisions.

> 15. An electoral division represents a natural community established on the basis of demographical, geographical and sociological considerations, such as the population density, the relative growth rate of the population, the accessibility, area and shape of the region, the natural local boundaries and the limits of local municipalities.

Finally, the Election Act at section 17 makes it possible for the Commission de la représentation électorale to deviate from the numeric criteria established under section 16 by creating exceptional electoral divisions.

> 17. The Commission de la représentation may, for exceptional reasons, depart from the rules set out in section 16 if it considers that, owing to special circumstances, its application would not adequately serve the purpose of this chapter. Every such decision shall be in writing and give reasons.
> Notwithstanding section 16, the Îles-de-la-Madeleine described in Schedule I are an electoral division.

The Commission considers the principle that every vote is of equal weight. It also considers the ceiling to the number of electoral divisions and the criteria, whether numeric or other, for establishing the boundaries. It is on the basis of all these factors that the Commission de la représentation électorale exercises its responsibility when establishing the boundaries of the electoral divisions. All of these factors are marked by an order of priority that the Commission must determine and adhere to.

It seems clear that the principle that the vote of each elector has equal weight, set out at section 14, is a fundamental rule. Although the application of this principle cannot be absolute, it is defined by a number of authors as being electoral representation on the basis of the number of electors. It implies that each elected member should represent about the same number of electors and that, accordingly, different electoral divisions must have the same political weight.

This fundamental principle is one of the rights entrenched in the Canadian Charter and in the Québec Charter of Rights and Freedoms under the concept of "right to vote". Neither of these two documents contain any precise text explicitly defining the principle of equality of voting power; however, the courts have decided that this principle forms part of the rights that the "right to vote" guarantees [(1989) 59 D.L.R. (4th) 247]. This judgement was rendered by Madame Justice McLachlin then of the Supreme Court of British Columbia. It is interesting to note that she has since been appointed to the bench of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Consequently, it has to be understood that any decision rendered by an organization that conflicts with this principle may be voided under these Charters even where it complies with the Election Act.

The principle of equality of electoral voting power, by its very definition, an equal number of electors per elected member, leads to the conclusion that the numeric criteria in establishing boundaries take priority, but this does not mean that these criteria are singled out as the only ones.

The obligation set out at section 15 to respect the "natural communities" and to consider socio-economic criteria cannot be understood as a mere justification for possible future departures from mathematical equality. Quite to the contrary, the law requires the respect of community factors when applying numeric criteria. The law also requires that electors cannot be arbitrarily brought together solely on the basis of a targeted total number.

For this reason, it is understandable that the Commission cannot decree numerous exceptions without opening itself up to a judicial review of which we now know the standards. It does not only suffice that the law be considered valid since a decision based on the discretion given to the Commission under the law may be considered beyond its powers and consequently voided.

This is how the two general rules set out at section 14, i.e. the maximum number of 125 electoral divisions and the principle of equal voting power, have influenced the specific application of the boundary criteria, firstly when the electoral census data compiled after the last general poll was analyzed, and secondly when it was decided that it would be advisable to establish new boundaries for the electoral divisions.

2. SUMMARY REPORT

On 19 December 1989, the Commission de la représentation delivered to the President of the National Assembly its summary report on the boundaries of electoral divisions as required under section 19 of the Election Act, the text of which is found on page 2 of this report.

On the basis of the census conducted before the general election of 25 September 1989, the Commission de la représentation drew up a table indicating how the electorate was distributed over the territory of Québec. The Commission brought to the attention of Members of the National Assembly the fact that, without taking into account the Îles-de-la-Madeleine, thirteen electoral divisions had electors in excess of the ceiling established under section 16 of the Election Act, the text of which is found on page 3.

In fact, in eight of these electoral divisions, the number of electors exceeded by more than 25% the quotient of 37 366 electors, and in five, the number was more than 25% less. Table 1 provides the list. A map illustrating this phenomenon was attached to the summary report. It also seems appropriate to append this map to this report.

TABLE I

List of the 13 electoral divisions where the number of electors deviates by more than 25% from the quotient established under the Election Act

Electoral division	Number of electors	Deviance
A) Positive deviance
La Peltrie	50 550	35,29 %
Chauveau	49 195	31,66 %
Groulx	48 952	31,01 %
Bertrand	48 274	29,19 %
Vimont	47 919	28,24 %
Saint-Jean	47 753	27,80 %
Vachon	47 393	26,84 %
Nelligan	47 289	26,56 %
B) Negative deviance
Mégantic-Compton	27 642	-26,02 %
Matane	27 378	-26,73 %
Bonaventure	27 041	-27,63 %
Matapédia	26 220	-29,83 %
Ungava	25 087	-32,86 %

Moreover, even where there are no significant deviances, the census data disclose that electors are distributed very unequally over the territory. Thus, the surrounding urban zone of Québec, and to a greater extent, that of Montréal have a very high average number of electors per electoral division. Conversely, the average number of electors in the Gaspésie is low, and this is also the case in the centre-south region of Québec and in the downtown areas, above all in downtown Montréal.

2.1 Demographic context

The changes in the distribution of electors across the territory are similar to changes observed by the most recent demographic surveys. They result from the same major causes, i.e. aging of the population, decline in the birthrate and domestic migration.

Natural growth rate per 1000 inhabitants
Québec, 1951-1989

Even though the population of Québec has increased in absolute figures from 1985 to 1989, rising from 6 514 200 to 6 694 200 inhabitants, the growth rate has slowed over the years. The decline in the birth rate, measured by the drop in the absolute number of births (from 98 002 in 1976 to 83 486 in 1987) and the drop in the reproduction rate (from 1.75 children per female of childbearing age in 1979 to 1.40 in 1986), has set in motion a decline in the natural growth rate (see Table II). Immigration alone has not been sufficient to compensate for this decline.

At the same time, the average age of the Québec population has risen from 25.6 years in 1971 to 32.0 years in 1986. The pyramid of age groups reflects this reality. There are fewer young people and more middle-aged people.

The ageing of the population is a factor that must be analyzed together with population mobility over the territory of Québec. Generally speaking, most recent studies lead to the observation that the rural regions and the downtown centres have a stagnant or declining population that results to the benefit of surrounding urban regions such as the Montréal south shore. As the Conseil des affaires sociales has already observed, young people are leaving rural environments and downtown cores in order to live in suburban areas[1]. These factors obviously have an impact, as can be readily understood, on the distribution of electors over the territory, and accordingly affect the structure of the electoral map.

2.2 Changes in the number of electors

The number of electors in Québec increased by 2.06% between 1985 and 1989, rising from 4 576 600 to 4 670 690. Additionally, the proportion of the number of electors over the total population has gone from 65% in 1976 to 70% in 1989. This is principally the result of population ageing (see Tables III and IV).

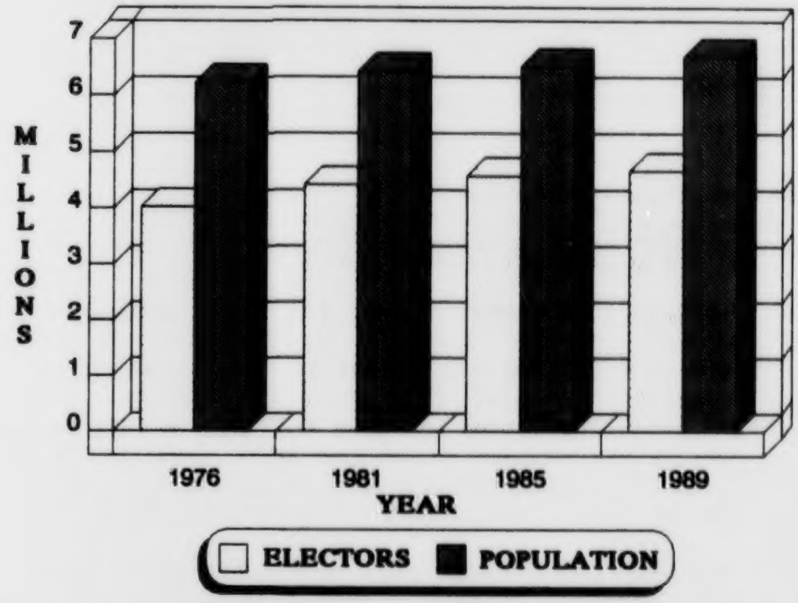
TABLE IV

Number of electors and total population in Québec



The changes observed during the last electoral census relating to the distribution of electors over the territory confirm the findings of studies that have been conducted over the last few years in Québec on the topic of population mobility. The 2.06% increase in the total number of electors is spread very unequally. Electors have, as has been the case with the general population, tended to concentrate in zones of economic growth, and conversely, abandoned zones of decline. There is no indication that these trends can be altered in the short or medium term.

Finally, even though it is possible to understand the general demographic, ageing and population mobility trends throughout Québec and in certain major zones, it is very difficult to identify in advance each electoral district where there will be a significant increase or decrease in the number of electors and it is even more difficult to estimate deviances because migrations result from numerous individual and group decisions.

Nonetheless, if general trends are confirmed, if the number of electors in each electoral district changes at the same rate as between 1985 and 1989 and if no changes are made to current boundaries, then within four or five years at least 30 electoral divisions will have exceeded the upper or lower limit of 25% from the quotient.

The Commission has calculated the number of electors forecast for 1993, i.e., in all likelihood at about the time when the next general election takes place after which the Commission will determine whether it is advisable to proceed to establishing new electoral boundaries. This is a valid working hypothesis forming part of the electoral tradition under our parliamentary regime. The privilege of the Prime Minister to call a general election whenever he considers advisable may alter this working hypothesis. However, as time passes, the socio-economic factors and numerical data tend to confirm the projections set out in this report. These projections have been drawn up by extending over the 1989-1993 period the changes to the number of electors which have been observed between 1985 and 1989. Table V sets out the anticipated deviances from the quotient. A general election called before the customary period of four years would result in slightly fewer repercussions to the number of electors per electoral division although a general election called after four years would tend only to accentuate these deviances.

This table has been drawn up by taking into account that electoral divisions will retain until 1993 the same rate of change to the number of electors as they experienced between 1985 and 1989. It does not include the 13 electoral divisions that have already deviated in 1989 by more than 25% from the quotient described at pages 7 and 8 of this report.

We observed that there were significant imbalances in the representation of electors and that, in all likelihood, the same demographic factors would continue to give rise to the same consequences in the future. The Commission considered that the equality of voting power was compromised. It advised the National Assembly that the establishment of new electoral divisions appears to be necessary to comply with the criteria established in chapter I of title II of the Election Act.

3. PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE OF 5 APRIL 1990

On 5 April last, the Commission des institutions studied the summary report of the Commission de la représentation in compliance with section 20 of the Election Act.

After hearing representations from Members, the Commission de la représentation communicated its decision to the President of the National Assembly, on 12 April last, to proceed to establish new boundaries to the electoral divisions of Québec, as provided under section 21 of the Election Act.

The Commission notes that its choice to proceed to fix new boundaries for the electoral divisions satisfies the observations made by Members of the National Assembly. As a result of their comments and suggestions, it seems that the Members of the National Assembly, who are fully aware of the legal duties that mark the work of the Commission de la représentation, favour a reform which would result in more equitable representation while avoiding the occurrence of major changes after the next general election.

Although the comments of members of the Commission des institutions do not legally bind the Commission, the Commission believes that it should pay particular attention to these comments. There seems to be a consensus with respect to the need to proceed to a major reform, which would respect a fair balance in the distribution of electors while ensuring some stability in the establishment of electoral divisions over the forthcoming years.

4. KEY FACTORS INFLUENCING THIS PROPOSAL

In light of the situation that the Commission has described and the requirements of the law, this reform involves a significant number of modifications. In fact, over the course of years, it has been possible to ensure better representation for electors living in rapidly growing regions by adding to these regions electoral divisions without, however, taking divisions away from less populated zones or those with slower growth. Now, the situation has radically changed. The upper limit of 125 electoral divisions, established in 1987 by an amendment to the Election Act (1987, c.28), was reached in 1988. The Commission now has no other choice: to comply with the principle of equal voting power, it must both add and take away electoral divisions whenever the mere restructuring of boundaries proves to be an inadequate solution.

To achieve as equitable a reform as possible, the Commission used its analyses and forecasts not only in relation to each electoral division, but also over whole regions embracing several electoral divisions and corresponding more or less to the administrative regions or to parts of these regions. The Commission also wanted to ensure that the average number of electors per electoral division would be comparable throughout Québec.

The Commission believes that the new map will guarantee a very high degree of equity for all electors considering the legislative provisions and the available data concerning the distribution of electors over the territory as well as in keeping with the Commission's objectives of balance and stability.

The preliminary report is based on the premise that it is advisable, even necessary, that the boundaries of electoral divisions be as stable as possible. It is in fact very desirable to avoid too frequently transferring a large number of electors from one division to another. The Commission has submitted a proposal that it believes represents the best result given this important concern.

5. THE PROPOSED REFORM

In this chapter we will describe the overall framework of the proposed reform. We will thus examine the principal changes that this reform involves on a region-by-region basis. The modifications to certain boundaries and the requirement to find new names for some divisions will then be discussed. The most important statistics relating to the proposed map appear below.

5.1 General observations

It is worth remembering that the proposed reform takes into account that for a long period of time, owing to demographic changes, major modifications to the electoral map have occurred cyclically, that is to say, every ten or twelve years. Essentially, the reform consists of rearranging the electoral divisions in a different manner between high growth zones and declining growth zones in order to establish a map which conforms with the principles and criteria for establishing boundaries under the Election Act. In order to obtain this result, six electoral divisions have been taken away from zones where the average number of electors per division is low and where it has been noted that the population is declining: three electoral divisions on the island of Montréal, one in the regions of Chaudière-Appalaches and the Lower Saint Lawrence, one in the Gaspésie, and one in Estrie and Bois-Francs. These six subtractions permit six electoral divisions to be added to zones where the average number of electors per division is very high and where there is a rapidly growing population, i.e. two in Montérégie, two on the north shore of Montréal (Laurentides and Lanaudière), one on the île Jésus and one in the Québec City region (north shore).

Other regions of Québec are less affected by the changes. These regions are the Outaouais, Abitibi, the North, Mauricie, Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean, and the North Shore.

The proposed changes affect 104 electoral divisions. In 90 out of these 104 cases, these modifications involve the electorate and affect 766 000 electors. In 14 cases, no elector is displaced and these are above all modifications for concordance purposes. The proposed map brings about changes to all regions of Québec. Most of these changes are designed to eliminate current exceptions (see Table I) or are designed to avoid exceptions in 1993 (see Table 5).

5.2 The reform, region by region

The following pages set out the highlights of the reform, region by region. The reader will find a detailed description of the boundaries of each of the 125 proposed electoral divisions in the second part of this report. A map reproducing these new boundaries is appended and should be consulted when reading the following text.

5.2.1 The Greater Montréal Region

The Greater Montréal Region has been considerably modified. On the one hand, three electoral divisions on the île de Montréal that have a stable number of electors or a number on the decline have been removed; on the other hand, five electoral divisions have been added, one on the île Jésus, two in the Laurentides and Lanaudière regions, and two in Montérégie.

The modifications affecting the île de Montréal are designed to decrease the size of the exceptional electoral division of Nelligan and to avoid further 1993 exceptions. The three electoral divisions that have been removed approximately correspond to the territory of the current electoral divisions of Dorion and Laurier, Westmount and Saint-Louis, and Saint-Henri and Sainte-Anne. In all, 28 electoral divisions will be affected by the proposed changes.

Three electoral divisions are modified on the île Jésus. The addition of one electoral division, temporarily assigned the name of Vimont 2, guarantees a better representation of electors. It allows both a reduction in the size of the exceptional electoral division of Vimont and also avoids further exceptions in 1993.

In Montérégie, 15 electoral divisions are modified. The addition of two divisions temporarily assigned the names Iberville/Saint-Jean 2 and Verchères 2, results in a better representation of electors. It also has allowed the Commission to reduce the size of current exceptional electoral divisions (Bertrand, Saint-Jean and Vachon) and to avoid exceptions in 1993.

In the Lanaudière and Laurentides regions, all electoral divisions have been modified. Two have been added and these had been temporarily called L'Assomption 2 and Rousseau 2. They provide better representation of electors and allow both one exception to be eliminated, i.e. the electoral division of Groulx, and further exceptions to be avoided in 1993.

A modification to unorganized territory not involving the displacement of any elector has been made to the north of the electoral division of Labelle in order to have the boundaries of this electoral division correspond with administrative boundaries.

5.2.2 Québec (North Shore)

In the Québec City region, one electoral division has been added. It has been temporarily called Chauveau 2. This addition provides better representation for electors and allows the Commission to propose a map that eliminates current exceptions (La Peltrie and Chauveau) and avoids exceptions in 1993. Boundary modifications affect ten electoral divisions. Moreover, certain corrections to unorganized territories involving no elector have been made to the boundaries of electoral divisions in order to have them correspond with administrative boundaries.

5.2.3 Estrie and Bois-Francs

In Estrie and Bois-Francs, all electoral divisions have been modified. The modifications, except for the electoral division of Sherbrooke, are the result of a subtraction of an electoral division in the territory centred around the current electoral division of Richmond or are designed to avoid Mégantic-Compton from becoming once again an exceptional case in 1993. As for Sherbrooke, the modification involves altering the boundaries of the division to conform with municipal boundaries owing to the fact that the town has annexed part of Saint-Élie-d'Orford, part of Ascot and part of Lennoxville, involving a total of 20 electors.

5.2.4 Chaudière-Appalaches and Lower Saint Lawrence

The electoral divisions included in the regions of Chaudière-Appalaches and Lower Saint Lawrence have had their boundaries modified mainly owing to the removal of one electoral division from the territory comprised between the current divisions of Beauce-Sud and Rivière-du-Loup. The modification to the electoral division of Chutes-de-la-Chaudière is designed to prevent this division from becoming an exception in 1993. Only the electoral division of Lévis is not modified.

5.2.5 Gaspésie

In the Gaspésie, all electoral divisions have been modified because of the removal of one electoral division from the territory corresponding approximately to the current electoral divisions of Matane and Matapédia. The removal is to avoid the current exceptional cases (Bonaventure, Matane and Matapédia) and to prevent the same electoral divisions from becoming exceptional cases once again in 1993. Additionally, the Commission has transferred an unorganized territory between the Rimouski and Matapédia/Matane divisions that does not involve any elector.

5.2.6 Outaouais

In Outaouais, modifications to four out of the five electoral divisions in the region have been made. The most significant modification involves the transfer of almost 6000 electors between the electoral divisions of Chapleau and Gatineau. Part of the town of Gatineau, currently in the electoral division of Chapleau, is transferred into the electoral division of Gatineau to prevent the Chapleau electoral division from becoming an exceptional case in 1993. Another modification allows the municipality of Cantley to be located within a single electoral division, owing to the fact that this municipality has, since its creation, been shared between two electoral divisions. Moreover, the modifications proposed to the boundaries of the electoral division of Papineau arise from the addition of two electoral divisions to the regions of Lanaudière and Laurentides. Other modifications, in unorganized territory and involving no elector, have been made to the electoral divisions of Gatineau and Pontiac in order to have their boundaries correspond with administrative boundaries.

5.2.7 Mauricie

The boundaries of two electoral divisions in Mauricie (Laviolette and Maskinongé) have been modified by the transfer of unorganized territories and an Indian reserve. This transfer is designed to have the boundaries of these two electoral divisions correspond with administrative boundaries. In the electoral division of Laviolette, almost 600 electors are affected by the modifications. The correction made to the boundaries of the electoral division of Maskinongé does not involve any elector.

5.2.8 The North

In the North, the territory of the Ungava electoral division is expanded in keeping with the wording under section 14 of the Election Act which provides that Québec is divided into electoral divisions. This increase affects no elector.

5.2.9 Abitibi, Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean and North Shore

The regions of Abitibi, Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean and the North Shore have had seven of their electoral divisions modified because of the transfer of unorganized territories and an Indian settlement. These transfers involve no electors and are designed to have the boundaries of the electoral divisions correspond with administrative boundaries.

5.3 Adjusted boundaries

It will be noted that several modifications involving the transfer, in whole or in part, of unorganized territories have occurred. The Commission wanted to make use of the reform to effect these corrections in order to bring these territories back into their original region, insofar as possible, and consequently have the boundaries of the electoral divisions correspond with the boundaries of the administrative divisions. Moreover, the Commission has endeavoured to avoid, once again insofar as possible, the allocation of these territories among two or more electoral divisions. Finally, the Commission wanted electoral divisions to have more modern boundaries since a number of boundary lines have fallen, with the passage of time, into disuse when compared with the cadastre.

Furthermore, minor corrections have permitted the boundaries of electoral divisions to be adjusted to the new local municipal boundaries of Sherbrooke and Cantley.

5.4 New descriptions

All these modifications will require that the Commission select new names for some twenty electoral divisions. On this subject, the Commission invites electors to make suggestions. The Commission stresses that it is preferable to avoid the use of composite names or names of municipalities. After studying the suggestions received and after having taken the advice of the Commission de toponymie, the Commission will proceed to assigning names to these electoral divisions. In the interim, names have been assigned for identification purposes (Table VII). These names appear in italics in the report and on the maps.

5.5 One exception

The Commission has allowed only one deviance exceeding the quotient established under the Election Act. This is for the electoral division of Ungava. This division maintains its status as an exceptional electoral division. This status has been given to it under the provisions of section 17 of the Election Act. The reasons for this decision are as follows:

> The electoral division of Ungava currently embraces a vast territory where a sparsely populated and dispersed population lives at a number of places of unequal importance. Demographic considerations alone would have justified an increase to the electoral division at the expense of Abitibi or Saguenay--Lac-Saint-Jean. However, because of significant distances, the absence of road links between municipalities located on the periphery, the eventuality of new development projects and the possibility of a chain reaction which would have a significant effect on neighbouring regional environments, the Commission has no other choice than to retain the current status of the electoral division of Ungava as an exceptional electoral division.

CONCLUSION

Under the Election Act, the preliminary report of the Commission de la représentation is made public. The Commission has undertaken all necessary steps to ensure the greatest distribution possible. The steps required before a new map passes into law are set out below.

Over the next six months, the Commission will hear representations from Members of the Assembly, electors and interested bodies. The Commission attaches great importance to public hearings as part of its work. Every elector, wherever he lives in Québec, is or may be affected by the final definition of the electoral map. It is important to remember that it is during the course of public hearings in the different regions of Québec, that the Commission will be able to uncover the socio-economic realities that documents do not disclose and above all the Commission will be able to understand the viewpoint of Members of the National Assembly and citizens. The Commission will examine as carefully as possible all opinions submitted to it. No final choice can be made without constructive cooperation from all interested parties.

After hearing all presentations and after analyzing the opinions, the Commission de la représentation will deliver to the National Assembly a report indicating the establishment of the electoral divisions. This report will be debated for five hours in the National Assembly. Not later than the tenth day following this debate, the Commission will establish the boundaries for the electoral divisions. The list of electoral divisions, including their names and their boundaries, will then be published in the Gazette officielle du Québec.

The new electoral map will only however enter into force when the National Assembly is dissolved except where this dissolution occurs before three months following the publication of the list of electoral divisions in the Gazette officielle du Québec. In accordance with the provisions of sections 39 and 40 of the Election Act, the census planned for Autumn 1991 will use the new boundaries of the electoral divisions.

PART II - THE 125 ELECTORAL DIVISIONS

1. EXPLANATORY NOTES ON THE DESCRIPTION OF ELECTORAL DIVISIONS

The proposed electoral divisions are described and listed in alphabetical order. The number of electors indicated under the name of each electoral division has been calculated on the basis of figures provided by the Chief Electoral Officer of Québec in his Rapport des résultats officiels du scrutin du 25 septembre 1989.

The municipalities, Indian reserves and settlements, reserved lands, unorganized territories as well as their boundaries, have been compiled as at 1 July 1990.

Where the words autoroute, avenue, boulevard, chemin, côte, rue, voie ferrée, canal, lac, fleuve, rivière, in French, and way and railway, in English, are used, they refer to the median line unless provided otherwise.

Two maps have been provided for the reader at the end of the volume and these maps set out the proposed changes in relation to the current electoral divisions. The first map illustrates all electoral divisions, while the second illustrates the agglomerations of the Montréal, Québec and centre-south sectors as well as more detailed insets of Sherbrooke and Gatineau.
